[BLACKJACK] Clyde's New Forum [HOOKERS]

<http://buzzleberry.com/forum/index.php> BUT BE SURE TO GRAB A PROXY --- he's monitoring IPs

backstory is he told us he was just going to make a private thing for people he'd met IRL but actually it's open to pretty much anyone who'll fit into their little hugbox. clyde claimed a long time ago that if he made a new forum, i'd be allowed in. let's see if he can keep his word.

This proves, beyond a doubt, that these people are more concerned with their friends than they ever were with any community. The fact that they made it invite only reinforces that completely. This is a clear case of failing to admit the problem they had here was nothing more than wanting something for themselves and their friends instead of trying to work with a community.

If he does keep his word, I strongly suggest you don't take up the offer.

I wash my hands of clyde, I'm done defending this stupid shit. It's funny how he always gave me 1 worded answers of "i don't care" or "this is stupid bullshit" but the actions he's taken now greatly contradict his stance.

When did PVCC's relations with Mr. Cash sour? Was it that whole avatar thing? I thought that was just between one or two people...

basically he's really insecure and A. wants power as validation B. wants validation from other people C. after his old friends didnt suck his dick all day, he assumed they were all evil and talking about him behind his back. which in fairness is true now, but only because it's a self-fulfilling complex.

this forum is one in a long series of attempts to be in charge

All this is incredibly  to me.

I already mentioned this to fuckinstupid. I don't give a fuck if they have their own forum. It just bothers the fuck out of me that there are some people who I would have expected to be invited that weren't invited.

So while we're being accused of excluding people and doing things behind other's backs, these same people are doing the exact same thing. Just saying.

I'm not going to hide that I joined, there's no secret about it anyway.

I miss some of the people that left after the recent drama, this place has seemed quieter since then. I've never been in the mumble or the tinychat cliques, or whatever it was that was the underlying reason for all the arguing. I told those demanding a constitution (white glasses) they were overreacting, and I have also said on here that I haven't agreed with every decision that has been made in here (community concerns). If this is going to be another stupid schism, I don't want to have to pick sides. I like this forum, I want everyone back on here. However, I'm friends with a lot of people in both groups, and the fact that there is now this ridiculous divide is frustrating. I want to be able to talk to all of you without having to have two windows open.

I was invited because I was talking to some people and just asked if they would come back now that everything was calmer, and it was suggested I joined in there instead. I had no idea it existed until last night. So, I did. It's really not a threat to this place. It's honestly just people who didn't like how things were being run on here and left. I think that some are more comfortable with me around because I have never been associated with any cliques or whatever. I've just spoke to people on the forum, whoever they were.

Man, this is some shameless shit.

I'm inherently disgusted by the very thinly veiled "bitter ex-PVCCers and their hugbox" bullshit, and then like FS mentioned, this is all hypocritical and selfish bullshit spitting right in the eye of the big message these same fucks were trying to send about the importance of community and understanding.

I never, ever understood how these folks couldn't just take two seconds to go "hey, this is the internet and I can continue posting and talking to the people I like without getting involved in and/or provoking drama" (cuz that's always worked just fine for me) but nah, forget growing up, run off into your own little insular faggot corner.

Thats funny, I more or less said the same thing about missing some of those members, but I was never given the option or knowledge of there being a forum due to my affiliation. Apparently the feeling is one sided.

But from what I heard it is nothing, but a bunch of sadness feeling/wound licking threads put together which I greatly abhor anyway.

same here

maybe they didn't tell me because of my friendship with cogsdavz not that i care really but what the hell, all over a forum originating from a fat retard's antics

I kinda miss Sygerrik (although he really went out like an absolute cunt), but no tears shed over the rest of them. We either didn't really socialize or they made themselves look like total clowns over the last schism (which the more I look back really was just a matter of flushing out groupthink hugbox crap and my only regret is that we bothered with the ugly pretense of the community concerns thread and didn't just say "hey Megaman and Shoggoth, start behaving or get the fuck out of here".

I agree with this, but I'm not sure I agree with the way people are regarding this. People disliked the way things were run here and left - that seems to be it. They wanted a community with rules and so on, we didn't provide that, so they made it themselves. I can see where this is going, and I don't want to be involved. I like you guys, I like some of them.

But for the record, I don't give a fuck about megaman.

Basically PVCC is slowly devolving into anarchy & civil war like British society in Children of Men. What we need to unite us is Chris Chan suddenly appearing again against all odds, crying & crapping himself - just like the baby from Children of Men!

A community with rules. That's fair.

Looking for it in Clyde, that's a fool's errand. He'll get bored and we'll see how that works out.

I don't give a shit what happens to this place and I'm not getting involved with it on any level, I just think it's kinda...pathetic and the fact it exists really shakes my faith in the level of maturity these people are operating on.
