Mrs. E. P. Bosch opened her cottage last week and will remain until after Easter. She is entertaining her son, Russell S. Bosch and wife and daughter, of Newfield. Mr. Bosch is recovering from an operation for appendicitis and was ordered to Wildwood. Charles W. Bosch was a week end visitor to the resort which always affords him endless delight. Mr. Bosch seems fully recovered from his long illness of last summer and will as usual spend the most of the summer in Wildwood.

A little colored girl discovered a fire in Mrs. Wyckoff's cottage last Saturday night and the firemen were called out and saved the building. Having rented the house Mrs. Wyckoff came down last Saturday morning to put it in order and built a coal fire in the stove. After supper she went out and while away the fire occurred.

The Street, Now and Then

The first year of Wilson has been an eventful one for Wall street. Starting with his election, or even before, the market began to go down. The President-elect, so it seemed to the street, was unfortunate in some of his utter ances, and this did not reassure the financial interests. When he took office various factors conspired to further the general belief of the street that he was a radical of the first water, but most of these factors, it turned out, were despite the President, rather than because of him. The climax, as everyone remembers, came last June, and at that time the stock market was dangerously near the panic level of 1907. But then the turn came. Since then, with the usual reactions, the trend has been generally upward, and while the market average is still some six points below what it was on March 4, 1913, the tone is steadlly improving, whether quoted values Cape May; Woodbine and Court House, do or not. For the immediate future at Woodbine; Wildwood and Ocean there are several opinions—and many City, at Wildwood. capable judges believe that prices will have to have at least one more break City, at Woodbine. before the real upturn can come-but for the long pull sentiment is almost year following a failure to secure the universally bullish. President Wilson minimum of credits named. still has three years before him and possibly seven, and nobody doubts for a moment that by the end of his incumbency not only the stock market, but the whole country, will be in vastly better condition than it has been or is -Brooklyn Eagle.
