Cleopatra Cometh. . . . Chances are, you have seen this little two-word alliteration here and around. And chances are, you wonder what the hell it is all about. Well now, it can be told. . . . Cleopatra Cometh is not the name of a hot new singer on the Motown label. Cleopatra Cometh is the name given to the major event to be staged on March 2nd in New Orleans by the Houston Motorcycle Club. The procession is part of the Mardi Gras happening and the H.M.C. has pulled out all the stops. . . . So far, and this is just the beginning, the processional pageant will include Torchy Lane as Cleopatra (who will be carried in on a large, hand crafted litter, borne by eight slaves), a slave master, four people carrying cow heads (that's some sort of religious symbolic deal that you wouldn't understand if I explained it to you), a dwarf (from the mini-bike club in Pascagoula, Mississippi), dozens of incense bearers and flower throwers, a snake dancer with a six-foot indigo (that's a snake, dirty thinker), three (count 'em) acrobatic dancers, dozens of hunky males in scant attire, some with bronze bodies (others in gold and silver), plus three dozen guys with pagan minds doing tributes to Africa, all to the accompaniment of original music written especially for the procession. Now let's see anybody top all that! Or dare to miss it. The Wrangler M.C. in Dallas will offer an assist to the monumental undertaking. Be there! After the Bourbon Street appearance, the Cleopatra Cometh participants will re-stage the event at Mary's on March 26th. Everybody loves a big winner. And we've got one in Cleopatra Cometh. . . . Also, if you need transportation to Mardi Gras, contact the Tejas M.C. They'll provide round trip passage, leaving from the Loft (formally the Surf lounge) on Saturday, February 28th, at 9 a.m. and returning on March 2nd. No one need miss Mardi Gras for lack of wheels, thanks to the Tejas M.C. . . . In other Houston news, please note that the Detour now has new hours, from noon to 2 a.m. Christ Communion Church has moved to its new location at 908-B Winston, in the Heights. And, the GPC now meets at the MCCR building on Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. . . . By the way, members of the GPC met with Rep. Barbara Jordan on Feb. 20th and were told by the lady herself that she was in support of bill H.R. 5452. That bill goes a long way in recognizing gay rights and Ms. Jordan says she can be counted among those who support it. And speaking of support, the Houston gay community turned out en masse for Hollywood Babylon, a benefit for the Montrose Activity Center. Those wishing to offer suggestions concerning the ultimate M.A.C. services, or fund-raising ideas, will find themselves well received by the M.A.C. . . . In Dallas, close wraps are being held on the upcoming surprise event to be staged by the Dallas Motorcycle Club. No one will give even a clue as to what is going on, but they

It's better
at The Club.

Club

all say it's going to be a "bigeer," sometime around Easter. They have a way of making all their surprises work out — so watch for it. . . . The popular Dallas bar Chucks has declared Thursdays as western night, and those wearing a cowboy hat get well drinks for just 75¢ and beer for only 50¢. Ride 'em cowboy. . . . Looking at the calendar for this week, it's quite apparent that a lot of good folks will be crowned, with the final rounds of competition in several contests to be completed during the next few days. When it's all over, victors will have been declared in the Miss Time Machine Contest in El Paso;
the Miss Gay Dallas Pageant at the Olive Branch; and the Miss Old Plantation at the bar of the same name in Houston.
Kind of makes you want to go out and buy stock in a crown and robe factory, huh? . . . And next up, the Miss Gay
Texas Contest at the Old Plantation.
Winners, winners, winners. . . . And finally, contestants are now being accepted for the next to last annual Mr.
& Mrs. Sick Leprechaun Contest to be hosted by Park Berts and Georgia Phillip on March 13th at 10 p.m. at the Sundown Saloon in San Antonio. Only comedy performers need apply, and may do so by calling 648-9991 in San Antonio. Winners for Mr. & Mrs. Sick Leprechaun, Ms. Uncongeniality, Ms.
Untalented, Ms. Unlikely to Succeed and Ms. Unpopular will be judged in the following areas: sickest swimsuit, most unacceptable gown, and most uncalled for talent. Unfabulous prizes will be awarded to the winner. This show is going to be a lovers dream. See ya in line. All for now.

SUNLINES

your general horoscope for March
By Hedwig Brandt

Aries: Focus your attention on more harmonious working relationships with others, and you will achieve success in present activities. On-the-level discussions bring out facts confirming what you have imagined all along.

Taurus: The beginning of a friendship or love affair could be threatened by excesses of passion. After making an honest analysis of your thoughts on the subject, determine the extent of your present involvement. Act toward a balance of ideas and plans with this kindred soul. Avoid petty misunderstandings and the small resentments which arise from them.

Gemini: Inspect the confines of your circle of acquaintance for the presence of a person whose outstanding traits are honesty, friendliness, and passion; the result of your discovery, unexpected, of a perfect mate.

Cancer: Merely attempting to hang on to your material possessions will not move you very far out of an unpleasant situation. Perhaps your viewpoint is dimmed a bit by the complexity of your present position. Open yourself up to wise counsel from concerned associates but don't be a spend-thrift, either. Economy and imagination remain your most useful resources.

Leo: Complacent surrender to past disappointments leaves you with little desire to act for the future; associates see you as especially uncreative. Avoid dallying with accomplishments already behind you. Along with a bit of bad news comes the realization that you have been deceived. At least, let others do that for you and don't deceive yourself.

Virgo: Continued failure of some people to make good the debts they owe you leads to consideration of new business methods. A quiet and imaginative individual may be of some service.

Libra: As soon as gained, you throw a project aside for something higher. You may seem miserable without reason; however, different more rewarding pursuits duly capture the imagination, and past successes or goals may well prove piddling by comparison.

Scorpio: The processes of healing brought on by time are nearly complete. Emotional and spiritual regeneration is coupled with the resumption of activities unwisely abandoned. Your genuine kindness and generosity once again asserts itself in the image others have of you, and success is achieved in different undertakings.

Sagittarius: A message or invitation can bear trickery. Propositions should be carefully looked into; sensual delights well might leave both participants alone and disappointed. Be sure of where you stand in intimate personal relationships.

Capricorn: After bearing the brunt of several burdens you begin to make headway at last. Partial success is achieved in varied projects, and a pattern of stability in family affairs begins to emerge. Optimism is well-founded in the weeks and months to come.

Aquarius: Chances are good for a new beginning. You may be limited merely by fear to move out of a present situation. Take chances now. Another person's attempt to make off with what is rightfully yours will fail.

Pisces: Unselfish aid to another heralds the beginning of a successful enterprise, or the start of a rewarding journey. Chances are excellent that you will experience good health and well being in times to come, provided you take advantage of opportunities at hand. Love begins to show its colors in your expression, and a pleasant relationship with a younger person unfolds.

Life With Vera

a serial by John Gardner

The lobby of the Hyatt Regency in Houston. Burt had been there many times before, under happier circumstances. There was the night that he and Wayne ate three whole buckets and Colonel Sanders' chicken while riding up and down in the glass elevator. And managed not to throw up. Until they were halfway to Mary's.

But if Burt were remembering those past times, it did not show on his face. There was no hint that he even knew what a smile was, much less ever having attempted one himself. Not on this night. Burt's eyes were blank, his skin pale, his clothes rumbled and one got the feeling that his shoes would have been delighted to be walking the other direction. All in all, it was though someone had revived a poor, tortured zombie from its semi-final resting place and set it adrift to waft painfully through eternity in the hotel lobby. It was pitiful.

If it hadn't been for the bell boy with the big bulge in his crotch, Burt's eyes were as unmoved as those of a statue. But then, there are some things that even a zombie can't help taking a quick look at. No matter how much pain he's in. Or how much trouble.

After a quick ride in the elevator and four prayers, one of which was somewhat impressive, Burt arrived outside the door of his parent's hotel room. Placing his ear against the door, he listened for any clue that would indicate the severity of the turmoil on the other side. Silence. This was worse than he had feared. Had he heard his mother crying, he could have gone in and tried to calm her down. Had he heard her preaching about sin, he could have filled the tub and let her baptise him. But no, all was silent. He could imagine what was going on inside. He just knew that they were sitting inside, staring at each other, wondering why their son was last seen running down the hall of his apartment complex dressed like Judy Garland.

"How are ya?" broke Burt's train of thought, as a neatly dressed young businessman passed him in the hall, stopping at the door adjacent to the one on which Burt was attempting to raise the courage to knock.

"Fine, fine." Burt said automatically, with unthinking politeness. The stranger took out his key, opened the door to his room.

"Glad to hear it," added the stranger as he entered his room. "Real glad to hear it."

It's doubtful whether Burt heard the stranger's last words, for he was once again in agonizing torment as he considered his own problems. He had to knock. He had to face up to the situation. Running away once had only made things worse, there could be no running away this time. Besides, he had been standing in the hall of the hotel for a long time. People in the hotel didn't know his situation or that he was trying to muster the strength to go inside the room. A room that belonged to his parents. For all the tourists knew, Burt might have been a thief "casing the joint."

"But if I were a thief," Burt thought to himself, "I wouldn't be standing outside this locked door. I would rob the room next door, where the door is already open." It wasn't until he came out of his thief fantasy trip and back to reality that he realized that the open door was the one the stranger had entered. He had left the door partially open.

But here was no time to ponder the apparent carelessness of the stranger, for much to the amazement of Burt himself, Burt had knocked on the door to his parent's room. This was it. The facing of reality. And probable death.

Silence. Still silence. There was no answer. Of all the possible responses to his knock, this was the one completely unexpected. Where had they gone? Or, better yet, were they gone at all? Or had they joined in a suicide pact, killing themselves in honor of a very bad drag show. An amateur on a one-night fling. He knocked again. Likewise. Silence. The plans had gone awry. Once again, Burt was going to have to "think things through."

And he was 18 seconds into that thought process when he heard a voice.

"Have you got a match?" It was the stranger in the room next door. "The maid didn't leave any and I'm dying for a cigarette."

Burt glanced over to the partially opened door where the stranger stood. Burt reached into his coat pocket. There were no matches. He reached into his pants pocket. No matches. The sight of large, tan shoulder muscles and a sculptured stomach line will eventually soak into anyone's head. And by the time Burt was reaching into his back pocket for matches, even he had noticed that the stranger was wearing only a towel.

"I really need a smoke bad," said the stranger sternly. "Or something."
