

THE SUPER SPIES: More Secret, More Powerful Than the CIA

by Andrew Tully

Here is the headline-making, inside story of the American spy agencies that only the highest government officials know about. More powerful and more secret than the CIA, these agencies plant spies in Red China, Russia and among neutral and friendly nations and operate a network of electronic snooping devices in outer space and on land and sea. The biggest and most secret is the National Security Agency (NSA) whose specialty is electronic spying and cryptography. Also revealed are the inner workings of the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) and the intelligence branch of the State Department (INR). The Super Spies tells how these secret agencies learned about the invasion of Czechoslovakia before it occurred and what happened when the U.S. tried to stop the Russians. Also told is the story behind the mission of the Pueblo and much more.

Andrew Tully, who resides in Washington, D.C., is the author of the best-seller CIA: The Inside Story and the popular syndicated column "National Whirligig."
