TRADE SECRETS

Alan

Where are you from?
Chihuahua, Mexico

For how long have you been here?
I was in Los Angeles for 4 years in the past, then I went back to México and then I've been here in Dallas for a year and a half.

Single or Married?
Single.

How do you like Guys?
I like them to be easy going, slightly chubby, shorter than me, but specially I like good kissers.

How would a perfect first date should be?
It would be in a quiet place where I could get to talk to him and get to know him, I'm very physical so if we are compatible in every way the perfect date would end with us waking up together the next day.

What kind of music do you like?
I like pop and dance, but I usually listen to romantic music at home.

How do you sleep?
Naked. As soon as I get home I usually just take off my clothes. It would be perfect if I met a guy that has that same habit

What do you expect from this year?
I have a great job, I guess I'd like a guy to love and find a balance.

KALIENTE, DALLAS TX.

JESSE GARCIA

Jesse Garcia has fought for the rights of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) people and Hispanics for the last decade.

These two communities have been on the defensive for the last eight years under President George W. Bush. From bans on same-sex marriage to anti-immigrant legislation, conservatives have used these issues to draw attention away from their failed domestic and foreign policies and blame everything wrong in America on LGBT citizens and Hispanic immigrants.

"Being a Gay Latino in America, you cannot help but notice how government-sponsored hatred and inequality makes you want to just go out to the streets and protest," said Garcia. "I've channeled that energy into community organizing. I enjoy empowering LGBT Latinos and Latinas with the power to vote, becoming U.S. citizens and getting access to education."

Jesse has been busy working to undo the damage done under Bush by working with elected officials and national organizations to make sure President Barack Obama and his administration protect those who have been treated like second-class citizens.

Originally from Brownsville, Jesse left at the age of 18 to attend universities in San Antonio, where he earned a bachelor's degree at Our Lady of the Lake University and a master's degree at St. Mary's University. Both degrees were in communications, which helped him land a career with the federal government.

For the last 12 years, Jesse has worked with the U.S. Air Force, U.S. Army, Peace Corps and Department of Agriculture.

When he moved from San Antonio to Dallas, Jesse became increasingly involved in politics. In 2005, Jesse was elected to serve as a board member of the National Stonewall Democrats, a nationwide organization of LGBT Democratic clubs. In 2007, Jesse was elected as president of the local chapter — Stonewall Democrats of Dallas — and re-elected in 2008. During the 2008 election year, Jesse served on both the LGBT advisory councils of presidential candidates Hillary Clinton in the primaries and Barack Obama in the general election.

His proudest achievement, though, was launching an organization that brought his two communities together: LULAC 4871 — The Dallas Rainbow Council. The League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) is an 80-year-old civil rights organization that advocates for the equality of all Hispanics in the U.S. LULAC has more than 700 councils throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. In 2006, Jesse cofounded the very first "Gay" LULAC council in the nation.

"We were inspired to launch the council after my Gay Latino friends and I marched for immigrant rights on April 9, 2006, in downtown Dallas," said Garcia, LULAC 4871 president. "We marched against the bigotry of this nation. The same people who come after Gays are the same people who want to pass English-only laws, end birth-right citizenship and kick out undocumented people who have worked hard to keep our economy running." LULAC 4871 has worked to help feed families during the holidays, mentor youth, raise money for worthy causes and promote LGBT acceptance in the Latino community.

"LULAC is about civil rights. This organization and its membership understand what discrimination is and are not about to impose discrimination on others," said Garcia. "There have always been LGBT Latinos in LULAC. We just decided to be out and proud and start the conversation going about accepting Lesbians, Gays, Bisexuals and Transgender people in our community. Let's take down this 'machismo' front and start talking about respect. Every family has an LGBT family member. We teach in your schools. We are your doctors. We are business owners. We are your neighbors." In 2008, LULAC 4871 was awarded "Council of the Year" in Texas for its successful work in the community.

Jesse hopes to accomplish more for LGBT Latinos in Texas, but he needs your help. Jesse invites you to the next LULAC 4871 meeting on Tuesday, April 28, 6:30 p.m., at the Resource Center of Dallas, 2701 Reagan St., Dallas, TX 75219. For more information about LULAC 4871, visit www.lulac4871.org. For more information about Jesse Garcia, visit www.jessegarcia.org.
