About the Virginia Press Association

- The Virginia Press Association (VPA) was formed in 1881 when a group of Virginia newspaper publishers asked the General Assembly to authorize the establishment of an association that would look out for the best interests of the Virginia newspaper industry. Today, VPA boasts more than 175 member newspapers, magazines, universities, businesses and individuals affiliated with publishing.

From the beginning, VPA established itself as a firm defender of the Fourth Estate in Virginia, lobbying at the state and national levels on behalf of the Commonwealth's newspapers. VPA was there when Virginia created its Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) in 1968 and was instrumental in the restructuring of FOIA in 1989, 1999 and 2004. VPA also takes a leading role in the ongoing study of FOIA laws.

The VPA annually recognizes the award-winning work of newspapers within the state during its annual news and advertising conference, and offers various training and educational workshops throughout the year. One of its most popular events is VPA Day in the Capital, held in advance of the general assembly session featuring discussions with state leaders about upcoming topics to be addressed during the session.

- Virginia Press Services Inc. (VPS) is a statewide and national ad placement service created in 1954 as the business arm of VPA. The industry-funded service offers members a simple and effective way to place multi-newspaper advertising schedules. VPS staff can handle the entire newspaper ad buy in print and digital.

- The Virginia Press Foundation is a tax-exempt 501(c)(3) organization that was founded in 2013 by the Virginia Press Association Board of Directors. The mission of the foundation is to help ensure the future of Virginia journalism by providing training and resources to members, to develop the next generation of readers and journalists, and to educate the public on the importance of the First Amendment and the role of a free press.

In addition to the Hot Topics workshop series and annual VPA News and Advertising Conference, VPA Day in the Capital is one of the association's most popular events offered by the Virginia Press Association each year.

FOIA issues? We want to know.

Has this happened to you?

FREEDOM

INFORMATION

ACT

If you have had any of these experiences, contact us:

- ✓ A meeting was called without proper notice - particularly an executive session of a board or council.
- ✓ Someone uses the working paper exemption and you know it isn't working papers.
- ✓ You ask for specific information under a FOIA request and only part of it is furnished.
- ✓ You ask for a police incident report - but are told you can't get it because it contains "personal information."

Invest in the future of journalism!

The mission of the Virginia Press Foundation is to help ensure the future of Virginia journalism by providing training and resources to members, to develop the next generation of readers and journalists, and to educate the public on the importance of the First Amendment and the role of a free press. The foundation also offers members and college journalism students scholarships to the annual Virginia Press Association News & Advertising Conference.

ZERO.

We take our responsibility to the planet seriously, which is why we've already reduced carbon emissions by nearly 50% since 2005 and methane emissions by nearly 25% since 2010. And we're not stopping there. We're committing to achieve net zero emissions across all the states where we do business by 2050. Why do we do it? Because our future is counting on it. To learn more, visit DominionEnergy.com/NetZero.
