

Kennedy as Health Czar?

No matter how you feel about RFK Jr. and his endorsement of Trump, one thing is for certain: his using a large part of his announcement to address chronic illness in the US caused by environmental toxins, especially in food and drugs, is a very good thing. Even if Trump doesn't win, or if Trump wins and fails to appoint Kennedy to anything, or if Trump wins, appoints Kennedy, and nothing gets done at the USDA and FDA, still this current cycle of reports is educating many people who haven't yet been exposed to this information, which will create major pushback against Big Ag and Big Pharma no matter what the government does. The very next day Kennedy was on Fox explaining this in more detail, including the dangers of seed oils and pesticides. So Kennedy is already fulfilling his prophecy and role before the election has even occurred.

The government is just a go-between, with citizens making the final decision on what they will eat, buy, and otherwise put into their bodies. If everyone gets educated and quits buying this poisoned food, it won't matter what FDA or USDA or any other government agency does or doesn't do. You will say the government will keep buying this food for public schools and soldiers, but not if no one is eating it. If most kids and recruits refuse it and start brown-bagging it like the old days, again the problem is solved with no government involvement. You don't need the government to solve your problems for you, since you are capable of solving them on your own—especially problems like this. You don't have direct involvement in military budgets, for instance, but you do have direct involvement in what foods you buy and eat.

[Actually you do have direct involvement in military budgets, since if everyone quit signing up for the military, they would have a hard time justifying the current budgets. You will say they will just draft people, in that case, but again, you don't have to show up for that, either. If everyone declines to be drafted, what are they going to do? They can't jail everyone's teenage boys, can they? Everything requires your cooperation, and if you stop cooperating all the bluffs will fail.]

But let us return to Kennedy. I highly recommend you watch his press conference, since the speech is very powerful, despite his ruined voice, especially the second half. It is completely anti-establishment, so I guess the UK dragoons will be sending someone over to arrest him this week. He says outright what I have been telling you for years: the big corporations are poisoning us all for profit, using our own taxdollars against us while doing so. They have bought out all the regulatory agencies and are actually subsidized by us, their victims, to do it. They are drinking not only from dirty profits but from the federal and state treasuries. It is a crime so vast and so awful most people can't comprehend the enormity of it, or imagine it might be true.

Kennedy reminds us that things have gotten much worse since I published that paper in 2012, with autism and every other tragedy still on a steep incline. They are now so bad you really have no option but to go completely off the grid. That or move to Europe, and Europe has its own problems, as you know. If I were having kids right now not only would I not have them in a hospital, I wouldn't even register their births. I would hide them completely from the government. That would be the only sure way to avoid the deadly vaccine schedules.*

Kennedy also reminds us—without saying it explicitly—that the vaccine genocide isn't the only crime against humanity in the past decades. This poisoning of the food and water supply is a similar and related crime against humanity, one that deserves more than the creation of a health czar or an overhaul of the FDA. It requires widespread trials for mass murder and mayhem against all these companies and their officers.

There have been many strange responses to Kennedy in the past 24 hours, but one of the strangest came from James Carville, who continues to self-destruct in front of the cameras. He was on Bill Maher today, and when Bill said Kennedy had endorsed Trump, Carville clapped and laughed maniacally. Maher didn't ask him what that was about, but when it came his turn to speak, Carville continued to chuckle, adding that “Dat boy ain't right. Something's wrong. He hit his head. I don't know what.” Except for one little problem:

It was Carville who was looking and acting like a vaccine-damaged troll, flopping around in his Nola hoodie like he was going to convince us he was still a college student by sheer volume. Maher seemed embarrassed by his response, which of course was content free and all ad hominem, but you have to ask why Maher would have him on. Everyone knows this is how Carville is now, so they should know he is only going to hurt his cause. No one who had just listened to Kennedy's speech and then Carville's response would think Carville was the sane one here, so why is he here? Again, I think it is part of the planned fail. The Democrats are being tanked on purpose to move the country right, so Carville is just doing his part. He may have been instructed to ham it up and look as bad as he possibly could. I can't explain it any other way.

The non-event DNC coronation of Harris was justly overshadowed by Kennedy's announcement, though it didn't take much. It was nothing more than a series of canned and ghosted speeches by party hacks, read straight from Teleprompters, again almost content-free. As usual the party has no statable platform except more of the same cultural disintegration we have come to know so well, so it relies wholly on sloganeering and outright lies. Its respect for its audience is zero. Obama's "hope" has been replaced by Harris' "joy", oh joy, but every time I hear this I picture Kamala soaking her fingertips in a bowl of suds:

I also think of DeNiro's King of Comedy, whose big joke was showing people his "pride and joy":

I guess for the Dems we just need to update that as Gay Pride and Joy.

And again, the Dems seemed intent on destroying themselves at their own convention, which you have to admit is novel. They brought former CIA-head Leon Panetta on stage to give a speech and endorse Harris, since he is such a cuddly and beloved figure across the political spectrum. Just what your average voter wants, right, an endorsement from a big-nosed Jewish CIA agent. It just makes everyone feel toasty.

They also brought on one of the least popular governors in the country, New Mexico's Michelle Luhan, who is rightly hated by the majority of people in her state.

She was one of the worst tyrants in the country during lockdowns, issuing illegal mandate after illegal mandate and destroying huge swaths of the economy. This is a “lady” who settled out of court for sexual battery against one of her male staffers. He won over $65,000 after she threw water on his crotch and grabbed his dick in front her entire staff. Her DNC speech centered on healthcare, but of course she didn't mention any of the things Kennedy did. Massive corruption doesn't concern her, she is just hoping for a federal appointment so she can be part of it.

Jamie Raskin gave his trademark slimy speech with all his usual Brian Stelter levels of charisma, hitting the pre-scripted lies we have heard a million times: the Democrats, “like Abraham Lincoln”, are here to save us from “fanatical insurrectionists”. I guess he figures you won't remember Lincoln was a Republican. And I guess he figures there are still a few people out there on ventilators who believe the mainstream account of January 6. He seems completely unaware that the J6 Committee which he chaired has since fallen into ignominy and disgrace, and that the people's recognition of that fraud is what ended Liz Cheney's sordid career. It is amazing it hasn't caught up with him yet, but it soon will, one way or another. He only survived in 2022 because he is from a tiny district in Maryland that for some reason the Republicans decided not to contest. They ran a sham candidate, indicating some sort of stand-down. But of course all Congressional seats in Maryland are rigged, and perhaps everywhere else. How else to explain the career of a Jamie Raskin, who has never exhibited even one redeeming quality. Raskin, Jewish of course, is the sort of guy that his highschool class wouldn't have trusted to run lunchroom clean-up, but here he is forcing his reptile personality upon a national audience.

The only way the DNC could have gotten worse is if we had seen speeches by Liz Cheney, Sean Penn, Keith Olberman, Robert DeNiro, or Rob Reiner. I am kind of surprised we didn't, but I guess they figured they could hit the full nadir even without that. Which they did. Never has American politics been more revolting, and that is saying a hell of a lot.

*The recommended schedule from CDC now includes 21 jabs by the age of six months, including a jab at birth for HepatitisB. Unless the newborn is a practicing homosexual or drug user, there is almost no way he could have HepB. The disease would have to come from the mother and she can be screened for it. So almost no babies need one dose of this, much less three. But because screening is imperfect, they have decided to recommend triple jabbing all babies. Brilliant.

You may be interested to know that Peter McCullough, former vice-chief of internal medicine at Baylor Medical, is now recommending a moratorium on the entire childhood vaccine schedule, along with many other prominent doctors. He did so this week on the Alex Jones show. And McCullough is not anti-vax. He still believes in the usefulness of vaccines in some situations, and sells the smallpox vaccine as effective in this show. But the reason he gives for ending the vaccine schedule is that polio, diphtheria, pertussis, and these other diseases are no longer a danger now that the water supplies are clean. And of course the mRNA vaccines aren't vaccines to start with. They were engineered to falsely address manufactured gain-of-function diseases like Covid. The current vaccine schedule is therefore nothing but a money maker for these disreputable and convicted pharmaceutical companies. It is doing no good and massive amounts of harm. Along with fluoride in the water and a thousand poisons in our food, this is what is causing the health collapse in the US.
