Indeed, the rallies at Spotts created a special memory that will last forever in our collective history...

This year the Pride Committee of Houston (PCOH) is considering returning the 1993 Houston Gay & Lesbian Pride Week "OUT AND PROUD" Rally to the original locale with the "Why Not Spotts?" campaign. Yes, it's only January, but Pride Week will soon be just around the corner, and the planning stages are already underway. In order to properly review our proposal and assess appropriate concession fees, the City of Houston requires advance knowledge of the types and number of booths on site. Therefore, at this

Covering AIDS And Living It: A Reporter's Testimony

By Jefferey Schmalz

from The New York Times

Two years ago tomorrow, I collapsed at my desk in the newsroom of The New York Times, writhed on the floor in a seizure and entered the world of AIDS.

I had been, as far as I knew, absolutely healthy, and it took the doctors a few weeks to reach their diagnosis: full-blown AIDS, with a brain infection often fatal within four months.

That I have lived these two years is a miracle. How long my luck will hold, no one knows. But for now, I am back working, a reporter with AIDS who covers AIDS.

I've thought a lot about my dual identity since the death last Sunday of Ricky Ray. I wrote about him and his family in 1988, about their new life in Sarasota, Fla. It was a year after their home was destroyed by arson in Arcadia, Fla., a town where many people hated Ricky and his two younger brothers because they were infected with H.I.V., a town where pickup trucks bore the bumper sticker "This vehicle protected by a pit bull with AIDS."

I recall my late-summer evening with the Rays vividly: Three barefoot boys in jeans and T-shirts, scrambling on the floor with their hamster. A sooty Garfield the Cat, himself a survivor of the fire, looking down from the china cabinet. "I'm only human," Garfield said when his string was pulled, and the Ray boys would turn giggly.

How proud I was of myself. How noble of me to write about these people nobody wanted to touch. How smug I was that I, a gay man, had escaped AIDS. (I know now that I was already infected. But I had not been tested: I felt great.) And how ambivalent I was about Rays, these people who had parlayed personal tragedy into celebrity—they seemed just a little too available for interviews—and who talked so glibly of death.

The March on Washington

by Deborah Bell

As we go to press with this second issue of the 1993 MOW Newspaper, the organizing for the March and the many events planned around it is gaining momentum. Projects from the creative and exciting (designing the rally stage and selecting the performers and speakers) to the mundane and practical (obtaining the permits and filling the merchandise orders) are underway with the help of many talented volunteers. The 120-member National Steering Committee (NSC) meets in Denver this month to review progress, finalize the platform, and stoke the organizing fires that have been ignited in all fifty states and the territories. Just recently organizing committees were formed in Rio Rancho, NM and Wichita, KS. The national office is operating as organizing central—tucked in between the offices of HRCF, the Gay & Lesbian Victory Fund, and PFLAG in a downtown D.C. office building. We already have a number of volunteers helping out at the office. If you have plans (or need a good reason to make them) to visit Washington in the next few months, call about becoming a volunteer in the office.

Already over 30 events—from a Texas two-step party to a Lesbian physicians conference to The Wedding (sponsored by the Rev. Troy Perry)—are scheduled to coincide with the March. More are being planned. And that's the result of the work of only one of the twenty working committees of the NSC. The Fundraising Committee, for example, in addition to a direct mail solicitation, has undertaken a major donors campaign, and is submitting requests for foundation funding. To date the march has been supported by contributions of $20 to $100 that members of the community have been sending in. Keep mailing those contributions. Special thanks to those organizations that have made contributions, including HRCF, GMHC, Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS, Athletic Supporter Ltd., and NGLTF.

Official travel agents and a DC-based hotel bureau have been selected, and are busy with reservation requests. The Merchandise Committee has been working overtime to fill orders for buttons and t-shirts. Keep your eyes open for stickers and posters; they will be available soon. The Newspaper Project printed and distributed hundreds of thousands of copies of the "Pride Events" issue around the country during the past summer.

We have just begun an advertising campaign with a full page ad in The Advocate. Advertisements are planned for other community publications.

The campaign to get endorsements is underway. We already have the support of several members of Congress and mayors. Region I led the way earlier this year by obtaining dozens of endorsements of public officials from the northwest. A preliminary endorsement list will be released in the next issue of this newspaper. Although there were only a handful of local governments endorsing the March in '87, our goal is to have all of the cities with Lesbian, Gay, and Bi civil rights protections as endorsers.

Wherever you go now, talk about the march so that every Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgenderal

What is a Cell Group Church ?

Maranatha Fellowship M.C.C. is opening for public worship on January 10, 1993 with a new concept of "church." MFMCC is built on the principle that all Christians (regardless of age, race, sexual orientation and economic status) are ministers. Professional clergy are not hired to do the work of the ministry, but are to equip the believers for the work to be accomplished. Every Christian has been given a spiritual gift or gifts by the Holy Spirit that is to be exercised for the benefit of the Body of Christ (the local church). A "cell group" church is not built around the assembly of all its members (i.e. a Sunday morning service), but the gathering of believers to become "Basic Christian Communities." MFMCC will have Shepherd Groups of no more than fifteen in each that will meet weekly in homes. These believers are equipped to do the work of the ministry from the Shepherd Groups. On Sunday the Shepherd Groups will gather for a Celebration service. For MFMCC, the life of the church will be in its Shepherd groups in the homes, not in a building. The focus of MFMCC is on relationship building and learning how to minister to one another.

MFMCC is an evangelical church with emphasis on teaching the Word of God, praising God in song, and personal ministry. We are a giving church with 10% of our income given to community and global outreach. A balance of prayer, study and action is our goal.

MFMCC believes that effective ministry is meeting people where they are. Christianity is a personal relationship with Jesus Christ shared through personal relationships with people.

We will be holding public services at the Holiday Inn West Loop across from the Galleria every Sunday. We will meet in the Afton Oaks room from 10:00 to 12 noon. To find out about Shepherd Groups or the ministry of MFMCC, call Rev. Janet Parker at 528-6756. Come and visit one of our services! λ

Covering AIDS And Living the Story

Now, four years later, at the age of 39, it is I who talk matter-of-factly of life and death and who have used my affliction to advantage, to obtain interviews and force intimacy. Does that make me feel guilty? You bet. But to have AIDS is to live with guilt and shame.

So many tensions are at work on those of us with AIDS that it's hard to chronicle them. My mother, seemingly healthy, died last year at 73, a few months after my sister told her of my AIDS. A coronary? A stroke? Who knows? In my mind, it will always be a broken heart.

I make sure everyone with AIDS whom I interview knows that I have it, too. To be sure, that is an interview ploy; I'm hoping the camaraderie will open them up. But there is more to it than that: I want them to take a good look at me, to see that someone with full-blown AIDS can carry on for a while, can even function as a reporter. Much of the time, it works. Their faces light up. There is hope.

'YOU'LL BE HERE SOON'

But sometimes it fails, and I am the one changed by our chat overcome by guilt that I have lived these two years when so many of my friends and hospital room-

mind, I just can't believe it: Maybe, just maybe, I'll live to see a treatment breakthrough.

How different these AIDS interviews now are from the one four years ago with the Rays, when all was well and I was just a spectator to the train wreck, not riding in one of the cars. It was simple then: A quick good-bye. A shake of the hand. A perfunctory wish for the future. Then off into the night. Now, it's embraces and tears and whispers from me and for me: "Stay well," "Don't give up," "God bless." And always there is that one futile question: Have you found the magic cure

To have AIDS is to be alone, no matter the number of friends and family members around. Then, to be with someone who has H.I.V.—be it interviewer or interviewee—is to find kinship. "I'm so glad they picked you to do this," Mary Fisher said in an interview just before she spoke at the Republican National Convention as a woman with H.I.V. With her, as with Magic Johnson and Bob Hattoy and Larry Kramer and Elizabeth Glaser, who spoke at the Democratic convention, the talk was the same: of anger and courage and politics. We talked of that deep nausea in the pit of your stomach when even cancer patients microphone in my face. His camera spotlight went on.

I didn't respond. People in the crowd moved closer; they wanted to know the answer. I wanted to know it, too. Finally, it came out: "Reporter." Some shook their heads in disgust, all but shouting "Uncle Tom!" They wanted an advocate, not a reporter. So there I stood, a gay man with AIDS out of place at an AIDS funeral, an outsider in my own world.

I walked back to the office in the rain thinking along the 30 blocks about how tough it must be for blacks to report about blacks, for women to report about women. Yet that kind of reporting is the cutting edge of journalism. Some people think it is the journalism that suffers, that objectivity is abandoned. But they are wrong. If the reporters have any integrity at all, it is they who suffer, caught between two allegiances.

*At a funeral march,
another reporter
demanded: "Are you here as a reporter or a gay man*

make it any easier, even when I'm reporting on issues besides AIDS.

BREAKFAST IN IOWA

Traveling the Country to interview voters about the Presidential election, I dropped by an Iowa cafe where, as a reporter from New York, I was hailed as a mini-celebrity. Asked to say a few words at a breakfast of 30 leading citizens, I wanted to tell them I had AIDS, to watch the stunned look on their faces. But I didn't. That would have crossed the line between reporter and activist. Yet I do tell some politicians I interview. In my mind, that's O.K. I can't explain why. I left the breakfast in Iowa feeling hypocritical, a disciple who professes to carry the message of AIDS but is most comfortable preaching to the converted.

"Why are you here with me?" Jerry Brown asked when, while I was covering his Presidential campaign for a few days, the conversation turned to AIDS and I told him that I had it. "I'm here," I said, "because it is what I do."

He leaned closer to me, asking quietly, "Don't you want to be off getting in touch with your spirituality?"

Religion. How I have wrestled with that one. I had wanted to stop in church the day before brain surgery. But to me it see that someone with full-blown AIDS can carry on for a while, can even function as a reporter. Much of the time, it works. Their faces light up. There is hope.

'YOU'LL BE HERE SOON'

But sometimes it fails, and I am the one changed by our chat overcome by guilt that I have lived these two years when so many of my friends and hospital roommates and people I've interviewed have died. At times, I think my fellow AIDS sufferers are laughing at me, looking up from their beds with eyes that say, "You'll be here soon enough."

Endlessly, I fret about my interviews. I know the buttons to push with people with AIDS and I push them well. Do I cross the line, pressing too hard for the sake of a good quote?

"I wish it wasn't true," Bob Hattoy said of having AIDS just before he addressed the Democratic National Convention. "But it isn't overwhelming me. Really. I don't know why."

I knew from my own experience the nightmares of waking up in a coffin, of wondering whether every cold was the big one that would do me in. I challenged him for not being honest, and he broke down. I wanted to hold him. I wanted to apologize. Then he hit me as hard as I had hit him.

"I think I will probably die of AIDS," he blurted out. "Won't you?"

Yes, I expect so. In my gut, I know it. Yet in the back of my mind, Mary Fisher said in an interview just before she spoke at the Republican National Convention as a woman with H.I.V. With her, as with Magic Johnson and Bob Hattoy and Larry Kramer and Elizabeth Glaser, who spoke at the Democratic convention, the talk was the same: of anger and courage and politics. We talked of that deep nausea in the pit of your stomach when even cancer patients pity you and when a doctor, who should know better, puts on latex gloves just to shake your hand.

There are time-outs in each of the interviews for both of us to get tissues, for both to pop our AZT, for both to laugh and always to hug. "I will see you again," Magic Johnson said pointedly, in what was not a social nicety but an affirmation of life between two people with H.I.V. Like each of the other interviews, ours was therapy for him. It was therapy for me.

"Who are you?" a TV reporter asked me at a funeral march in Greenwich Village for an ActUp leader dead of AIDS. The reporter knew full well who I was: the guy from The Times with AIDS.

The lid of the coffin had been removed, the open box carried on shoulders in the rain, led in the dusk by mourners with torches, the dirge of a single drumbeat setting the pace of this, a funeral turned protest against President Bush's handling of AIDS.

"Are you here as a reporter or as a gay man with AIDS?" the TV correspondent persisted, shoving a hand between two allegiances.

At a funeral march, another reporter demanded: "Are you here as a re- porter or a gay man with AIDS?"

Don't misunderstand; it was I, not my editors, who pressed for me to write about AIDS. For 20 years, I had been a by-the-book Timesman, no personal involvement allowed. But now I see the world through the prism of AIDS. I feel an obligation to those with AIDS to write about it and an obligation to the newspaper to write what just about no other reporter in America can cover in quite the same way. And I feel an obligation to myself. This is the place—reporting—where I am at home. This is the place where I must come to terms with AIDS.

I didn't write an article about the funeral march, judging it worth only a picture and a caption. I passed the journalism test that afternoon in the rain by failing the activism test. To turn activist would mean that AIDS, not reporting, would define me. It would be to surrender totally to the disease.

But no matter how neatly it works out in the mind, that doesn't mean they who suffer, caught between two allegiances.

He leaned closer to me, asking quietly, "Don't you want to be off getting in touch with your spirituality?"

Religion. How I have wrestled with that one. I had wanted to stop in church the day before brain surgery. But to me it would have been the height of hypocrisy to turn to God in desperation after years of turning away.

Yet I have become more spiritual. I think often of the dozen friends who have died of AIDS, and I feel them with me. It's not that I am writing editorials avenging their deaths. It's that I feel their strength, their soothing me on. They are my conscience their shadows with me everywhere: In the torchlight of the march. Over my shoulder. By my desk. In my sleep.

IT'S STILL NEWS

On its surface, life is much the same as before: I walk into the newsroom, sit at my desk, work the phone. But it is a through-the-looking-glass world. Sitting in my doctors office, listening to the latest update, I can't help thinking, "This is a good story."

An interview with Clinton on gay issues and AIDS was the oddest I've ever had. He had been briefed that I had the virus, but we never discussed it. It seemed self-centered for me to bring it up, and I guess he thought it rude for him to changed the ending so that Ned Weeks fears death, rather than facing it head on.

What did Mr Kramer do when he discovered he was HIV positive? At first he campaigned obsessively and loudly against the government's lackadaisical attitude towards Aids and what he considered to be the medical establishment's sloth. He wrote The

between the two of us, began liking my younger self, and I wrote the kid's journey in the play, the journey towards his death."

The journey passes from "discovery to guilt to momentary joy and towards Aids". As awful and agonising as it is, it has brought with it depth and wisdom. In a recent article in The New York Times he wrote: "My homosexuality, as

from The Times of London

The best playwrights like to expose their souls on stage, but in his latest play Larry Kramer, who is also American's foremost Aids activist, might as well have handed the audience a teaspoon and said: "Scoop out the contents of my head."

When Mr Kramers London psychiatrist, on whose couch he spent seven years, heard about the play, he observed: "Sounds like Larry learnt something."

Mr Kramer's latest offering, The Destiny of Me, opened to strong reviews and packed houses in New York last month. What the critics described as "a Jewish homosexual Long Day's Journey Into Night" is now set to run well into next year when it will also be staged in London.

The play is a Freudian's delight, being largely the autobiographical tale of Mr Kramer's eventual acceptance of his homosexuality, and featuring parents-from-hell. It not only includes a split personality, but allows the two sides of the split to get on stage together. At the play's core is Ned Weeks, a homosexual in his fifties who is HIV positive, looking for a miracle cure, and not expecting to find it.

Mr Kramer is also HIV positive and is 57 years old. He is aware the miracle will not be forthcoming soon, but he has done more than almost anyone to make sure that the medical establishment looks for it. Hard. He set up Gay Men's Health Crisis and the powerful civil disobedience and lobby group ACT-UP (the Aids Coalition to Unleash Power which counts among its "successes" the occasion on which 4,500 activists stormed St Patrick's cathedral in New York, chained themselves to the pews and held a "die in" at the feet of the cardinal).

His play is as angry—and funny — as some of the demonstrations he has engineered. But it has a nakedness a willingness to gut family and self, that his previous play, The Normal Heart, did not risk so much. Why? Because Mr Kramer thought he would be dead by the time The Destiny of Me was staged. "I figured it would be the last words of an opinionated author," says Mr Kramer, in his apartment in Greenwich Village. "I wasn't in any hurry to get the play on originally, but then when I had a health scare with my liver and this HIV business in one ugly package, I decided, OK, I want to pull this out while I have my energy and my health."

He intended to leave word that the play should not be presented while his 93-year-old mother was alive. Now, given time by a medication that returned him to fairly good health, Mr Kramer is dreading the day she decides to leave her nursing home and come to the city for a viewing. His brother, Arthur, says the account of the family's life is "regrettably" rather accurate. Mr Kramer has changed the ending so that Ned Weeks fears death, rather than facing it head on.

What did Mr Kramer do when he discovered he was HIV positive? At first he campaigned obsessively and loudly against the government's lackadaisical attitude towards Aids and what he considered to be the medical establishment's sloth. He wrote The Normal Heart, a scream for attention for Aids which became one of the biggest earners for the Royal Court Theatre, in London. Now, a kinder, gentler Kramer has forsaken the outside world of noise and anger for the world inside himself

In the play, and in life, he dissects his early battle against his homosexuality in the 1950s, when some psychiatrists (and Mr Kramer saw a great many) still believed homosexuality could be "cured", and the closet was packed to bursting. Much of this is seen through the vehicle of his younger self who appears alongside the older version on stage.

This character came into being when Mr Kramer started talking to himself over a decade ago. He does not consider this madness—psychoanalysis has made him comfortable with this form of discourse. He saw value in it. "I found myself talking to a young boy and then I realized the boy was me, but a completely different individual with his own thoughts and character. We would often disagree. Then, I began writing down scenes

The journey passes from "discovery to guilt to momentary joy and towards Aids". As awful and agonising as it is, it has brought with it depth and wisdom. In a recent article in The New York Times he wrote: "My homosexuality, as unsatisfying as much of it was for so long, has been the single most defining characteristic in my life."

Mr Kramer pauses to take a call from Barbra Streisand's assistant who wants 12 copies of The Normal Heart script because Ms Streisand plans to put it on screen. A British Arena crew is making a film about Mr Kramer's life to be shown early next year. (His psychiatrist from London— where Mr Kramer spent much of the 1960s— refused to be interviewed for the documentary on ethical grounds, much, it seems, to the writer's disappointment.) A little bit of fame here and there delights him.

The angry, obnoxious, loud-mouthed Mr Kramer, the caricature of someone else's play entitled The Night Larry Kramer Kissed Me, the scourge of talk shows, the needler of the Bush administration, seems to have gone quiet.

After an argument, Mr Kramer has mostly left ACT-UP to the younger generation, feeling that there is little more he—or they—can do. "One thing that do it. So there we were, talking about AIDS. I knew that he knew that I knew that he knew.

Before me on the desk are the letters—a hundred of them this year, some from people who read that I had AIDS, others from people who figured it out between the lines of my pieces. Those are the ones that I am proudest of. "Consider this letter a giant hug," wrote a man from Philadelphia. I have killed the message on my phone tape from a man dying of AIDS who had called begging me to save his life, to give him some nugget of information that would keep him alive. "Please!" he cried. I called him back to say there was nothing I could do except recommend doctors. I kept that tape for weeks, playing it over and over. "Please!" I wonder if he is dead now.

Oh, I have come to understand the Rays—those people who seemed so glib. Now, I see that they are like all of us with AIDS, trying to go on about their lives but caught up in this nightmare. They do what they have to do. We all do. I think about them. I am one with them. And I think about Ricky, the newest shadow looking over my shoulder.

My editors keep an eye on me, I am sure, to make certain that AIDS has not yet weakened my reporting. But I suspect I will be the first to say when it is time to call it quits. As I write this, I feel tired but sharp. The AZT is holding for now. The brain infection, although diminished, is still present, making the fingers of my right hand stiff and clumsy on the keyboard. I use a tape recorder; my short-term memory isn't what it was.

I hold a different job—one that is supposed to be less stressful. But I am sitting in my old spot in the newsroom to finish this, the same spot where I suffered the seizure. As I look up, I can see the wall clock clearly. I couldn't that Dec. 21 when failing vision was the first sign of trouble. Now, two years later, I see things more clearly than ever. And I am alive. λ

A friend was in the hospital, dying of AIDS. But Eddie was not only dying, he was whining. He demanded specific diet sodas, candy bars and flowers; he could not abide cheap roses from the deli or milk chocolate as opposed to dark. He refused to wear his new silk robe, which he deemed "too George Hamilton." He loathed the nurses. He patrolled the halls, lugging his intravenous hook-up behind him, just to light up an unfiltered Camel in every possible "No Smoking" zone.

Lavender ribbons appear in memory of the dead, pink ribbons denote Breast Cancer Awareness. Agony has become a festive holiday cor-sage.

Memorials have also become common; in Manhattan they have acquired Ziegfeld-like production values. Lives of performers and playwrights are often honored by name talent on Broadway stages. I have attended memorials where decade since the crisis began, writers have discovered comedy's value in confronting horror. The playwrights Harvey Fierstein, Larry Kramer and Scott McPherson, along with novelists David B. Feinberg and John Weir, are all wildly funny, often at the blackest moments.

Gay writers, drawing on the repartee that is a form of gay soul, use camp, irony and epigram to, if not defeat the virus, at least scorn and contain it. AIDS is not the end of gay life or gay laughter. If people can't giggle in hospitals or at memorials, all they can do is weep.

At the peak of the proceedings, the performance artist Ann Magnuson stripped to a G-string, along with pasties consisting of two strategically placed red ribbons. She lip-synched one of Shirley MacLaine's more dramatic moments from "Terms of Endearment," then a weeping, tuxedoclad attendant handed Ms. Magnuson an Academy Award. Still, many of Eddie's friends visited him. One afternoon, after leaving his room, we gathered in the hospital lobby and burst into uncontrollable laughter. Eddie was just not a suitably noble dying person; he was, in fact, a huge pain. Our laughter was the only possible release, the only way we could return to Eddie's bedside for further abuse. At that moment, five years ago, I knew that AIDS required a sense of humor.

Writers have been cautioned against employing wit in the face of tragedy. Humor, it is said, can dilute and trivialize; a joke can let the ignorant off the hook. This is nonsense. Humor is most necessary in days of overwhelming de-

I have attended memorials where the deceased's phone messages were played, where a road company of "Starlight Express" was reunited, where, the guests were handed song sheets for Sondheim's "Broadway Baby."

as a weapon.*

These were joyous, heartfelt tributes. Still, they sometimes resembled out-of-town try-outs. As a friend said, "When I go, I want the Winter Garden. I see a few sensitive speakers— and then Siegfried and Roy."

AIDS is an extreme challenge to a comic artist: are wisecracks in the worst possible taste? Yet, in the

A high point in AIDS absurdity occurred at a recent Broadway Bares benefit, at which some of the city's most limber chorus people

Pride Rally Update

by Robert Seiler &
Vicki Fraychinaud

This year the Pride Committee of Houston (PCOH) is considering returning the 1993 Houston Gay/Lesbian Pride Week "OUT & PROUD"

Rally to the original locale at Spotts Park (Waugh Dr. at Memorial).

Yes, it's only February, but Pride Week will soon be just around the corner, and the planning stages are already underway. In order to properly review our proposal and assess appropriate concession fees, the City of Houston requires advance knowledge of the types and number of booths on site. Therefore, at this time, PCOH is soliciting all interested businesses and organizations who wish to sponsor a booth to contact PCOH Tally Committee at the listings above ASAP!

BOOTHS!! There are three booth types available with respective fees. 1. Information only ($10). 2. Merchandise, limited to 3 items only and not to include food or beverage ($30). 3. Alcohol ($100).

Applicants for the latter must have an existing beer/wine license and arrange with TABC for temporary extension and additional $30 fee.

ENTERTAINMENT !! Additionally POCH is issuing a call to all local/regional performers - musical, vocal, theatrical or otherwise interested in securing a Spott on the program to contact us as well. Please indicate on the attached application form the type of entertainment and length of presentation. Try to keep it under 20 minutes. Of course, there is no fee. We want to be as inclusive as possible to provide a diverse and entertaining program. If you know an out-of-town entertainer you would consider sponsoring at the Rally, please list the information as well. We would love to hear your ideas.

FIREWORKS It is the fervent wish of PCOH to do so we must raise $5250!! Ouch. We prevail upon community businesses and individuals alike to donate whatever possible to the cause. POCH will be offering incentive packages for the business-mind. For more information, please contact PCOH and show your community support today.

Let's make 93' "OUT & PROUD" the best Pride Week Rally yet!

Texas Lesbian Conference

Houston is proud to be hosting the 1993 Texas Lesbian Conference (TLC) on May 21-23. This year's theme is: Menstrual Cycle to Motorcycles: Our Challenges and Victories. Because of the current political atmosphere, this year's conference should prove to be especially exciting.

The annual conference offers workshops, speakers, entertainment, and the events spotlighting various issues surrounding the lesbian community. There is a great need for community participation to ensure a successful conference. The TLC can use help on the following committees: Facilities, Entertainment, Workshops, Hospitality, Fundraising, Volunteer Coordination, Publicity and Marketing. The next two general meetings will be February 1 and 15. If you can help, leave a message at 867-8904.

The TLC Steering Committee is soliciting logos from community artists to represent this year's theme. You may submit your 8 1/2 by 11, black and white, camera-ready art to be received no later than February 12 to TLC, PO Box 27790, Houston, TX 77227. (Original artwork cannot be returned.) The woman submitting the winning logo will be credited in the TLC publications and will receive admission to all TLC events and an official TLC t-shirt. λ

Lips Together, Teeth Apart, a play written by Terrence McNally and directed by Michael Wilson, this performance explores the experience of sexuality and challenges our notions of gay identity. It is about two straight couples spending a 4th-of-July weekend in the Fire Island house David left his sister when he died of AIDS. The play presents both heterosexual and homosexual points of view. Much of the humor and pain in this play come from these peoples' struggle with their fears and prejudices about homosexuality, through February 7, Alley Theatre, 615 Texas Avenue ☎ 228-9341

WILDE 'N' STEIN CALENDAR

The Community Calendar was renamed in honor of the Wilde 'n' Stein Radio Show on KPFT, it was the longest continuous running gay and lesbian radio show until it was canceled last November.

*Calendar listing must be received ten days before the end of the month prior to publication. Photos encouraged! Please specify if the event is open to everyone. Use our format as a guide for listings, including time, date, place and a contact person and most important a phone number. Note that listings are printed only as space allows. Phone numbers listed are in the 713 area code and the city of Houston unless otherwise noted. This calendar is a community service of Houston Lesbian/Gay Pride Week. A special thanks goes to The Wand, Womynspace Activities/Network Directory for sharing their information with us. We plan to publish this newsletter by the beginning of each month. This calendar is also supplied to the Gay/Lesbian Switchboard of Houston, After Hours, the only Gay/Lesbian radio show on KPFT-FM and the community publications on a twice a monthly basis. Our success depends on items being supplied to us. We are looking for a volunteer to help organize this section. ## Gay Values, Truly Conservative

By Andrew Sullivan

from The New York Times

Perhaps the most depressing part of the last few weeks has been how predictably the politics of the military gay ban played itself out

By and large, lifting the ban was portrayed as a liberal measure, prompted by the usual interest groups and framed within a crude paradigm of civil rights. The opposition rested its final argument on the simple fear of homosexuals, on those intangible emotions the Joint Chiefs of Staff describe as morale

But there is another way of looking at the issue. Lifting the ban is essentially a conservative measure. It is not a radical attempt to ing them as foolishly embracing a system that oppressed them. For many years after the 1969 Stonewall riots in Greenwich Village in New York, which gave birth to the gay rights movement, the military issue wasn't on the official gay rights agenda at all. For those who came from the antiwar movement, it was anathema. It was only in the late 80's that some argued that it should be placed at the forefront of the battle for gay civil equality.

But the military issue came to the fore not because of political leadership but because of the gay people in the military who refused to compromise their integrity any longer.

Cammermyer — are better known than others.

I think of my first boyfriend, Joe, the adopted son of a military family from Nebraska, whose devotion to his father, a three star general, led him in the Air Force. Joe could never talk to his family about his emotional life, never initiate the relationship that makes a family a family, because his father would have been obliged to bring charges against his own son. Unable to sustain the lie, Joe quit and told his father who he was soon afterward. (His father reacted, with compassion and respect.)

lifted, he would not have the "moral courage" to come out.

When I am asked by people why I believe homosexuality is an involuntary disposition, constitutive of a person's deepest identity and therefore deserving of respect and civil equality, I wish I could show them the lives of these people. These are the alleged radicals whose devotion to their country was strong enough to risk severing their livelihoods and disrupting their lives if their sexuality were discovered.

Within any other minority, these people would be heroes to conservatives. Their private conduct would be deemed irrelevant.

was portrayed as a liberal measure, prompted by the usual interest groups and framed within a crude paradigm of civil rights. The opposition rested its final argument on the simple fear of homosexuals, on those intangible emotions the Joint Chiefs of Staff describe as morale.

But there is another way of looking at the issue. Lifting the ban is essentially a conservative measure. It is not a radical attempt to remake society but a pragmatic effort to react to a change that is already taking place: the presence of openly gay people in the military. The values that gays in the military are espousing, patriotism and public service, are traditional values. And the effect that ending the ban could have on the gay community is to embolden the forces of responsibility and integration and weaken the impulses of victimology and despair.

Certainly, radicals always suspected homosexuals who wanted to join the military, regard-rights agenda at all. For those who came from the antiwar movement, it was anathema. It was only in the late 80's that some argued that it should be placed at the forefront of the battle for gay civil equality.

But the military issue came to the fore not because of political leadership but because of the gay people in the military who refused to compromise their integrity any longer.

Many were of the generation that came out after AIDS, a sober generation, more determined than ever to stand up to brutalization but more realistic about how to overcome it. Unlike many of their elders, they did not want to rebel against mainstream society but to join it as full equals. These are the people who became the unlikely heroes of the new war. And this is, perhaps, the cruelest irony of the ban—that it has singled out those gays, Americans who are among the most patriotic, the most committed to living lives that, in other people, would be at the heart of the notion of civic virtue. Some — Joseph Steffan, Margarethe

Joe could never talk to his family about his emotional life, never initiate the relationship that makes a family a family, because his father would have been obliged to bring charges against his own son. Unable to sustain the lie, Joe quit and told his father who he was soon afterward. (His father reacted, with compassion and respect.)

Homosexuals in the military are traditionalists.

I think of another friend who devoted 16 years to the Navy, rising to lieutenant commander, highly respected by his peers, who, in a medical examination, was suddenly questioned about his sexuality, blurted out the truth and is now being discharged. With four years until retirement, he will receive no benefits and have to start a new career.

And the friend who is a sergeant in an elite Army unit, who listens daily to his recruits say they will kill the first soldier in their unit who says if he's gay and who told me that even if the ban is and civil equality, I wish I could show them the lives of these people. These are the alleged radicals whose devotion to their country was strong enough to risk severing their livelihoods and disrupting their lives if their sexuality were discovered.

Within any other minority, these people would be heroes to conservatives. Their private conduct would be deemed irrelevant to their public service. Just as in 1948, when the Republicans campaigned for racial integration of the military, Republicans, of all people, should resist reactionaries on the right who believe gay people are condemned by nature to 'second-class status and reactionaries on the left who call for gay men and women to abandon the very society they most want to join. Some, to their credit, have done so, among them William F. Buckley Jr. and Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato. Even Newt Gingrich a year ago voiced concern for gay soldiers' right to privacy before succumbing to political expediency and supporting the ban.

Gay Values

Conservatives should also see that lifting the restrictions is not a radical experiment that could risk military competence. It is a reaction to a problem already consuming the military as young lesbians and gay men refuse to acquiesce in their humiliation, and is a change that would be unlikely to accelerate the number of gay people prepared to come out in the barracks (In Canada, where the ban was lifted three months ago, not a single person has come out) It is also unlikely, unfortunately, to alter the harassment and intimidation gay soldiers are routinely subjected to, so deep is homophobia entrenched in a large part of military culture

It is in the interest of all of us, straight and gay, that the cause of these people not result in defeat or, worse, a new and bitter segregation. A defeat would send a signal to a gay community at a crossroads between hopeful integration and a new relapse into the victimology of the ghetto.

It would rebuke those who seek dialogue and community between gays and straights, penalize those members of the gay world who most want to join the mainstream and can lead the rest, and intensify the culture of despair already prevalent in a community wracked by plague.

Lifting the ban could heal a deep wound between gays and straights and lead the gay world in a new direction of integration and responsibility. The act would embody the sober, civic toleration—that is the essence of what most gay men and women hope for—not the approval of anything we do in private, not the embracing of some mythical abstraction called the gay life style, not the derogation of traditional values, but merely the recognition that we are human beings too, that the mere statement of our identity should not be a cause for violence or hatred or public discrimination

As gays and lesbians, we do not want anything special from America. We merely want to give back to America something of what it has given us, without having to compromise the essence of who we are. That simple, and surely conservative, desire is what is really at issue in the months ahead. λ
