Facebook is on FIRE!!!

I feel like I haven't spoken with you in ages...lots to talk about so let's get started!!! Child, the kids don't play on that..... Facebook.

Michael Andrews just had world war three with Jovaun Davenport. When I tell you his feathers were ruffled baby that is an understatement!

It starts with Raven allegedly still getting the girls for their money by selling wigs she makes but doesn't deliver. The girls have taken to Facebook in droves posting her photo all over with warning signs for other girls not to do business with her.

It is a growing list apparently...ask Symphony Capri she has a running count thus far...I digress... Solo these warning posts are using a lot of shots by Michael and he was outraged, I mean OUTRAGED.

So he asked Jovaun to pass on a post from him asking the girls not to involve his work in their petty mess. He promptly let Michael know that he wasn't relaying any thing. Child Michael went slap crazy and off!!! I mean he was livid. It's like really, over a message. This went on for days even after Jovaun unfriended him the rant continued.

Isn't any press good press, its not as if the photos were bad. Michael it was free advertising dude, chill. And to say the girls are being petty is ridiculous, those wigs are expensive and being robbed of your coins isn't petty? But hey that is just my opinion. You are better than this. Go forth and continue to take creative photos my friend. That is all:-)

Growing up Laz Estrada was always a singer. He grew up singing in church and listening to his favorite diva sing. "My mom was a singer, and I wanted to be just like her. In middle and high school, I was in band. But, late in high school, I re-discovered singing and haven't stopped." Graduating from the University of Houston's prestigious Moore's School of Music, he was able to participate in over 10 productions and travel the world for competitions.

This year, besides singing with the Houston Grand Opera he also tried his hand in Houston's Pride Superstar where he placed as the semi finalist, and his shot as a featured performer at the Pride celebration and studio time was out of his reach. He was one step away.

In 2010 Estrada rallied for the crown of Pride Idol (before the contest changed their name) but again did not take home the 'gold' instead snagging the second place spot in the long and grueling competition. "I'm glad I did it both times." He says. "Singing for Pride Houston is an incredibly humbling experience, I have made several new friends and fans this season and above all else, I am able to sing and not hide who I am."

"I learned [from Pride Superstar] that you need charisma, unique ness, nerve, and talent in any thing you do. I always tried to go out there and communicate with someone. There were weeks that I felt like I was missing my nerve, but I think that is the hardest aspect. To really believe that you can do what you set out to do takes nerve, so be prepared to own your greatness."

HOUSTON SINGERS

Some of his other career accomplishments include first place in the International Music Competition in Llangollen, Wales, UK. Proof that you do not have to win first place to still be a leader in music. "I want to be a working musician. I have no idea in what capacity" Laz says. "but I love to sing and I hope more than anything that when people hear me that they get that."

Meet Miss Cosmic International

Houston is the home of a new national pageantry system. Tina Mitchell has decided to base her new system out of the lonestar state and what better city than our fair hamlet. She has been an avid supporter for drag and the art form for years.

Tina attends national pageants regularly and always wanted to be apart of the glamour in some way. After a couple of mis-fits with other systems she wanted to create something of her own.

She wanted a place for the ladies to feel they had a chance to not only shine but be seen shining! Many times some systems become popularity contests and the truly talented entertainers get overlooked because people may not know who they are. They have to come back a couple of years, show loyalty and then the system will notice them.

This system is for those girls. It is based on the premise everybody is somebody and if you want to pursue a title where your beauty, your intelligence and talent WILL be rewarded, then this is a system for YOU.

The ever so beautiful and talented Roxanne Collins was chosen as the emeritus to represent the Miss Cosmic International title in its first year. Roxanne has been entertaining for over 22 years. She is a leader and well respected not only in Houston but across theCountry.

Miss Mitchell says she chose Miss Collins because of her poise and professional manner in which she carries herself.

She says Roxanne embodies the very essence of what her system stands for. And we couldn't agree more. Her beauty talent and sheer elegance along with her trademark sense of humor has made Hera crowd favorite here in Houston. Good luck Miss Mitchell and Miss Roxanne Collins...we will be watching
