

Chairwoman Luna, Ranking Member, and Members of the Task Force, thank you for the opportunity to testify today.

My name is Jeffrey Nuccetelli. I am a former military police officer with sixteen years of active-duty service in the United States Air Force.

I am here today because the American people have both the right and responsibility to know the truth about Unidentified Aerial Phenomena.

That truth remains hidden — classified and silenced by fear, retaliation, stigma, and confusion. Today, we are here to help break that silence.

Between 2003 and 2005, five UAP incidents occurred at Vandenberg Air Force Base, home to the National Missile Defense Project, a top national security priority.

At the time, we were conducting launches deemed by the National Reconnaissance Office as “the most important in twenty-five years.”

These facilities were vital — and they were repeatedly visited by UAP.

Each incident was witnessed by multiple personnel, documented, investigated, and reported up the chain of command.

We sent information up, but no guidance came down.

I personally witnessed one of these events and investigated others.

Six other service members — all direct eyewitnesses — have provided the information I share today.

The incursions began on October 14, 2003, when Boeing contractors reported a massive, glowing red square silently hovering over two missile defense sites.

After several minutes, it drifted east and vanished behind the hills.

This event — now known as the Vandenberg Red Square — was later referenced by Representative Luna during the first public hearing on this topic.

Official Air Force records documenting it are now held by AARO and the FBI.

Later that night, while I was on duty, security guards at a critical launch site reported a bright, fast-moving object.

As I responded, the radio erupted with panic:

Moments later:

“It took off — it’s gone!”

When I arrived, five shaken witnesses described a massive rectangular craft, larger than a football field, that hovered silently for about 45 seconds before shooting away at incredible speed.

About a week later, another patrol reported a strange light over the ocean, heading toward the base.

Believing it to be an unannounced aircraft, they declared an emergency and launched an armed response.

Before forces arrived, the object descended, hovered briefly or landed, then vanished instantly into the night sky.

The witness was later threatened and told to keep quiet about the incident, discouraging further reports.

And after that, things stayed quiet until 2005, when a patrol reported a massive triangular craft, larger than a C-130, hovering low over the main base. It drifted silently across the installation before disappearing into the night.

And then, I had my own encounter.

I was off duty, sitting in my backyard at night with two friends, and we noticed what first appeared to be a satellite — but its rhythmic pulse was unlike anything we had seen.

As we watched, it started maneuvering like a butterfly and would vanish and reappear in a different patch of sky. The object dropped steadily in altitude, and it vanished, then reappeared 200 feet over my house. It was a huge glowing orb of blue-white light, but it appeared solid and the light did not radiate from it. It vanished again, and reappeared a moment later in a different position. The orb then gently accelerated and we watched it for about 40 seconds as it receded into the night sky and became indistinguishable from the stars.

These events profoundly changed my life and the lives of my friends and coworkers.

They were not rumors or misidentifications — they were unresolved incursions over one of our nation's most important bases.

We stand at a pivotal moment in history.

The question is no longer whether these events are real — but whether we have the courage to face them. True leadership requires vision — a willingness to confront the unknown with transparency and resolve.

So I ask Congress to help We the People enact this vision. There are three goals—

1. Fund independent research and treat UAP study with the same seriousness as any other scientific field.

2. End secrecy and overclassification. Transparency is the foundation of truth — without it, witnesses like me are dismissed, and the truth remains hidden.
3. Protect the witnesses. Many stay silent out of fear — for careers, reputations, even safety. Protect them, and you embolden others to come forward.

These phenomena challenge our deepest assumptions about reality, consciousness, and our place in the universe.

Exploring them could unlock transformative breakthroughs in technology, biology, and human understanding.

Let this be the moment when America chooses courage over fear, transparency over secrecy, and progress over stagnation.

Let's show the world that our nation leads not only through strength — but in the fearless pursuit of truth.
