The main campus of the United States Naval Academy incorporates an area of 336.4 acres, including 7.4 acres of water, which lies on the northeastern edge of the City of Annapolis, Maryland. Since the Academy's establishment in 1845, the boundaries of the campus have expanded through land acquisitions and reclamation. The original tract of land, along the Severn River, was acquired in 1845 from the Army. Subsequent purchases extended the campus northwest across College Creek and River and Spa Creek. The current composition reflects these different stages of development. Building 194 is part of the property acquired across College Creek from the main campus.

Building 051 is a residential building that reflects the early twentieth century development of the Naval Academy. Constructed in 1904 and designed by architect O'Von Neurta, it was originally used as the stabler's cottage. The stable (Building 194) was constructed in 1904 immediately to the northwest of the the stabler's cottage. The stable building is currently used as the Academy's Hazmin Center. Building 051 is a simple interpretation of the Colonial Revival Style in material, proportion, and detail. It possesses integrity of design, location, and setting and contributes to the overall interpretation of the development of the Naval Academy.

Building 051 is recommended eligible for the National Register as a contributing resource to the USNA Historic District (AA-359). The property is associated with the expansion of the United States Naval Academy (Criterion A) and reflects the Academy's acquisition of surrounding land over the decades. Although not a notable example of its type or style, the building exhibits the general trends and architectural styles found throughout the base and thus it contributes to the overall historic district (Criterion C). Although located outside of the National Historic Landmark boundary, the Integrated Cultural Resource Management Plan prepared in 2000 for the United States Naval Academy recommended this building as a discontiguous, contributing resource to the USNA Historic District.

Information obtained from DOE form AA-359, Building 194 prepared by M. Hess/KCI Technologies, 7/8/30.
