OGLALA SIOUX TRIBE FACT SHEET FOR KINSHIP/GRANDFAMILIES

This fact sheet includes national, state, and Tribal data and information on Oglala Sioux Tribe (OST) programs that can assist kinship/grandfamilies. GrandFacts fact sheets for each state and the District of Columbia are also available online.

American Indian and Alaska Native Children Disproportionately Live in Grandfamilies

While the overrepresentation of American Indian and Alaska Native (AI/AN) children in kinship/grandfamilies is likely a product of the centuries-long shameful treatment of Native communities by the United States and the many inequities they continue to face, it is also a reflection of cultural strengths and resilience.

As of November 2025, there are 111 cases in case management and 211 in investigation involving children and youth in OST custody and foster care, with additional youth in guardianship or placed for adoption. To better understand child welfare data in South Dakota involving OST children and youth, the data below outlines the prevalence of out-of-home placement and the value of this resource in supporting tiospaye (extended family).

- ▶ Native American children comprise nearly 75% of South Dakota's foster care population, with over 315 OST youth in state care.
- ▶ About 30% of OST children and youth in South Dakota custody are living with family or friends.
- ▶ Approximately 1,500 OST families are receiving services under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA).

Oglala Sioux Tribal Programs That May Help

The Oglala Sioux Tribe is located on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation (Pine Ridge) in southwestern South Dakota and northwestern Nebraska. Pine Ridge is among the largest of the Reservations in the United States, consisting of 3,500 square miles contained in three counties (Oglala Lakota, Bennett, and Jackson). Pine Ridge is comprised of nine districts and over 50 distinct communities and neighborhoods. OST is governed by a 21-member council. Two representatives serve the Eagle Nest, Pass Creek, LaCreek, Oglala, Wounded Knee, and Porcupine Districts, while three representatives serve Medicine Root, Pine Ridge Village, and Wakpamni Districts. Individuals of both American Indian and non-Indian ancestry reside within the Reservation's geographic boundaries.

OST offers its members a range of services on Pine Ridge, such as social services, housing, education, culture and recreation, health and wellness, veterans services, and other community supports. OST serves their children and families involved in state child welfare systems nationwide where ICWA applies. OST members are also served by counties outside Pine Ridge and in state systems, including Rapid City, South Dakota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Minnesota, and Colorado.

The programs and services listed in this fact sheet are available to OST enrolled members and relative families that meet the eligibility criteria described in the entries for each program and service. Some resources are available to enrolled members of other Tribal Nations and community members, as noted in the service area and eligibility criteria listed along with each program and service. If you need more information about eligibility, how to apply, or how to access services, contact the program directly.

The OST Child and Family Code, Wakanyeja na Tiwahe ta Wooke, includes the following definitions:

§402.1 Wotakuye: Lakota Kinship

(a) Background, Tiospaye, and Tiwahe

(1) The root of Lakota social structure is the tiospaye—extended family. Tiospaye are comprised of tiwahe, immediate families, as well as individuals adopted through formal ceremony. Equality is a prevailing principle of tiospaye life. Responsibilities are dispersed throughout the tiospaye and no one is above the laws. Social classes do not exist, and leaders maintain prominence only insofar as they carry out the wishes of the people. Historically, tiospaye were self-sufficient and life revolved around them. However, federal policies and initiatives that accompanied reservation life promoted the assimilation of the Lakota into mainstream Anglo-American culture and have led to a loss of some of the strengths of the tiospaye lifestyle.

(2) Among the strengths of traditional tiospaye life and the strong emphasis on kinship was children never really became orphans. Upon birth, they had many mothers, fathers, brothers, and sisters. Thus, even though children might lose their natural parents, relatives stepped forward and assumed parental responsibilities. Furthermore, kinship customs minimized violence, conflicts, and disputes within the tiospaye. Few individuals would consider causing trouble among the people, knowing of the consequences they would face from disrespecting relatives.

§402.2 Lena Tuwepi he/hwo (Traditional Lakota Definitions)

(1) Oyate ("people"): The Lakota People

(2) Tiospaye ("extended family"): The root of the Lakota social structure; tiospaye are comprised of the immediate families of brothers and sisters, their descendants, and relatives adopted through formal ceremony.

(3) Tiwahe (“family”): A family unit resulting from a union or partnering (Hasanipi) of a man and a woman to raise children and to live according to the laws, ceremonies, and customs of the people.

(4) Wakanyeja (“child”): A sacred gift from Tunkasila, or Wakan Tanka—the Great Spirit conceived by the union of a man and a woman. Spirits conduct ceremonies in Nagiyata (the “spirit world”) to prepare for the child’s entry into Earth. Children are given a vision or role for their life on Earth. Children are pure and have special powers until around the age of puberty.

Other OST Definitions

Hunka Ceremony is a culturally based way to adopt others as members of your family. Hunka Ceremony is a way to make relatives. The Children’s Justice Center utilizes this ceremony for some kids in foster care, and it is the process available to kin caregivers. See a medicine man for more information.
