TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—California, originally a part of Mexico, revolted against that country in 1846, and was under military and provisional rule by the United States from 1846 to 1849, the Mexican Government having formally relinquished its claims in February, 1848, at the close of the Mexican War. In September, 1850, California was admitted to the Union as the thirty-first state. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 3,426,861, which represents an increase of 1,049,312, or 44.1 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of the state from 1850 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—California has 58 counties, of which 44 show increases and 14 decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.) Annexations of territory from one county to another since 1910 have resulted in changes in the boundaries of Butte, Eldorado, Glenn, Kern, Lake, Los Angeles, Mendocino, Placer, Riverside, San Bernardino, Sonoma, and Ventura Counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 155,652 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 22 (see Table 1), as against 15.3 in 1910 and 9.5 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed “minor civil divisions.” San Francisco County is coextensive with San Francisco city. In the remaining 57 counties of the state the primary divisions are the judicial townships, 580 in number, for which the population is presented separately in Table 2. The secondary divisions are 253 in number, comprising 184 cities and 69 towns. Each of 10 cities and 2 towns is coextensive with the township in which located, and each of 8 cities comprises 2 or more townships or parts of townships. In addition to these primary and secondary divisions, there are 10 Indian reservations in the state. Although these reservations are independent of the county organizations, the population of each is reated as a part of the total population of the county in which it is located. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—California has 185 cities, of which Los Angeles, with a population of 576,673, is the largest. San Francisco, with 506,676, and Oakland, with 216,261, are the only other cities having more than 100,000 inhabitants. (See Tables 3 and 4.) The following summary shows, for each city having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

¹ Returns for San Francisco for 1850 destroyed by fire; population in 1852, according to state census of that year, 34,776.

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of California living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 52.4 per cent in 1900 to 61.8 per cent in 1910 and to 68 per cent in 1920.

[In computing the increase from 1850 to 1900 the population of Indian reservations in 1900 has been deducted from the total population of the county in order to make it comparable with the total for 1850, which does not include the population of Indian reservations. The population thus deducted in the several counties was as follows: Humboldt, 1,112; Mendocino, 599; Riverside, 203; San Diego, 817; Tulare, 143.]
